Elizabeth is currently serving as an associate on the first multi-year DOJ/SEC FCPA compliance monitorship of a Russian company and its 25+ subsidiaries. As a part of the core monitorship team, Elizabeth has assisted in creating a compliance program for the company and drafting reports to the DOJ and SEC on the status of the company's anti-corruption compliance program.

Apart from her work in the Government Enforcement & White Collar Group, Elizabeth has worked on a variety of litigations in federal and state courts involving contract dispute, music copyright, and commercial litigation.

Elizabeth previously worked as a paralegal at a large international law firm for the intellectual property and patent litigation groups. During law school, she worked for the Vanderbilt Intellectual Property and the Arts Clinic where she represented a number of pro bono clients. She focused her time on preparing federal trademark applications and advising clients on music license agreements and copyright issues.

Life Beyond the Law

Elizabeth was a professional competitive ballroom dancer prior to attending law school and enjoys teaching ballroom dance in her spare time. She also enjoys traveling and trying new cuisines.

Elizabeth is a fluent Russian speaker and conversational in French.
